Persephone and the Seasons

by Heather Amery

1 One sunny morning, the goddess Demeter said goodbye to her daughter Persephone. "I'll be back for dinner," she called as she went out to walk through the fields. Demeter was the goddess of all the plants in the world, and she was the reason delicious corn grew tall in the fields and beautiful fruit ripened on the trees. The weather was always beautiful, and there were plentiful harvests all year.

2 After her mother left, Persephone went to meet her friends and pick flowers with them. As she searched for the most beautiful lilies, she was soon all alone.

3 Suddenly, she heard a loud noise and looked up anxiously. She saw a massive chariot pulled by four enormous black horses. The chariot was driven by Pluto, god of the Underworld. Pluto had fallen in love with Persephone, but he knew Demeter would never allow him to marry her daughter.

4 Before Persephone could scream, Pluto dragged her into the chariot and quickly raced away. As they thundered across the land, a huge cleft opened in the ground. Pluto drove straight into it, and the ground closed behind them. He and Persephone disappeared into the Underworld.

5 When Demeter returned that evening, she called to Persephone, but there was no reply. The house was empty, and soon it was dark outside, Demeter grew increasingly worried. "Where could Persephone be?" she wondered desperately. At midnight, she lit a torch, and set out to look for her. All night she searched unsuccessfully, calling, "Persephone, Persephone, where are you?" But there was no answer. For nine days and nine nights, Demeter searched. She did not stop to sleep or eat. Despite all of her endless searching, she did not find Persephone.

6 Dressed in black instead of her usual colorful clothes, Demeter wandered all over the country as a haggard old woman. Because she no longer looked after the crops, the corn withered in the fields, no fruit ripened on the trees, and the grass turned brown. There was nothing for the sheep and goats to eat, and there was not enough food for the people. Soon, they were facing starvation.

7 Zeus called an emergency meeting of all the gods and goddesses. "This is very serious," he said in a voice that sounded like thunder. "Unless we can persuade Demeter to nurture and protect the Earth again, all the people will die."

- 8 "Pluto must allow Persephone to leave the Underworld," said a goddess. "Only then will Demeter save the Earth."
- 9 Zeus called for Hermes, the messenger of the gods. "Go to Pluto and ask him, very politely, to return Persephone to her mother," he commanded. Hermes flew off immediately. Only the gods and goddesses could enter the Underworld of death and come out alive.
- 10 "I will never allow Persephone to go," growled Pluto. "I love her, and I am going to marry her." "Please, Pluto," begged Hermes. "Please be reasonable. You know Persephone doesn't love you, and she does not want to marry you."
- 11 "Very well," roared Pluto, very angrily. You know the rule. If she ate any food while in the Underworld, she must stay here forever." If she did not eat any food, I will let her go.
- 12 "That's easy," said Hermes. "Let's ask her." Persephone cried, in answer to the question, "I did not eat anything here. I've never touched even the smallest, most insignificant crumb of food."
- 13 A misty ghost of a gardener was listening nearby. "Oh, yes you did," he croaked bitterly. "I saw you. You picked a ripe pomegranate and ate it."
- 14 "No, no," cried Persephone, "I didn't eat it. I was so thirsty, I just swallowed a few of the seeds." "That's enough," shouted Pluto, delighted in his victory.
- 15 "Please, Pluto," begged Hermes, "let her go for a little while. After all, a few seeds aren't much." "Oh, all right," growled Pluto. "Persephone may go back to the Earth for half of each year, but she must spend the other half here in the Underworld with me."
- 16 Holding Persephone's hand, Hermes flew with her out of the Underworld to Demeter. "Oh, my darling daughter," cried Demeter, thankfully hugging Persephone. "You have come back to me at last." "Yes," sobbed Persephone, "but I must return to the Underworld for part of every year."
- 17 Demeter knew she was required to accept this. Immediately, she looked young and beautiful again. She put on her most stunning clothes and began to work urgently, making new shoots of corn and grass grow and leaves open on the trees. It was spring all over the Earth.
- 18 All through the summer, Demeter was happy and busy, watching the fine harvests of corn and fruit. However, when Persephone had to return to the Underworld, she was depressed, and it became autumn. The leaves on the trees turned brown, the grass stopped growing, and the weather turned bitterly cold. It was winter until Persephone returned. Then Demeter once again was happy, and it was finally spring again.

*adapted from Modern-Day Plague
by National Geographic

- 1 Deforestation is clearing Earth's forests on a massive scale. It often causes damage to the quality of the land. Forests still cover about 30 percent of the world's land area. Areas the size of Panama are lost each year.
- 2 The world's rainforests could be completely gone in a hundred years at the current speed of deforestation.
- 3 Forests are cut down for many reasons. The biggest cause of deforestation is agriculture. Farmers cut forests to have more room for planting crops or raising livestock. Many small farmers will clear a few acres to feed their families by cutting down trees and burning them. This is known as "slash and burn" agriculture.
- 4 Logging companies provide the world's wood and paper products. They also cut countless trees each year. Illegal roads are sometimes built so that loggers can access more and more remote forests. This leads to further deforestation.
- 5 Deforestation has many negative effects on the environment. The most dramatic impact is a loss of habitat for millions of plants and animals. Seventy percent of Earth's land animals and plants live in forests. Many cannot survive the deforestation that destroys their homes.
- 6 Deforestation also drives climate change. Forest soils are moist, but without trees to block the sun, they quickly dry out. These forest lands can quickly become barren deserts.
- 7 Removing trees deprives the forest of portions of its canopy. The canopy blocks the sun's rays during the day and holds in heat at night. Losing the canopy causes more extreme temperature swings. They can be harmful to plants and animals.
- 8 Trees also play a critical role in clearing away the greenhouse gases that cause global warming. Smaller forests mean larger amounts of greenhouse gases enter the atmosphere.
- 9 The quickest solution to deforestation would be to just stop cutting down trees. Deforestation has slowed a bit in the past few years. It is unlikely it will stop completely.
- 10 A better solution is to carefully manage forest resources. When trees are cut, new trees should be planted in the same forest. The number of new tree plantations is growing each year, but their total still equals a tiny fraction of the Earth's forested land.

5 In paragraph 6, the detail “forest lands can quickly become barren deserts” supports which line from the article?

- A Deforestation is clearing Earth’s forests on a massive scale.
- B Forests are cut down for many reasons.
- C The biggest cause of deforestation is agriculture.
- D Deforestation has many negative effects on the environment.

6 In paragraph 7, the word deprives means —

- A removing someone from office
- B taking someone from one place to another
- C leaving something at a different location
- D keeping something away from someone

7 In paragraph 9, the author writes “the quickest solution to deforestation would be to just stop cutting down trees” to show that the quickest solution —

- A is not economical
- B is not always realistic
- C may cause more harm
- D may be illegal

8 The author organizes this article by —

- A describing what deforestation is, the reasons for it, its effects, and some solutions
- B referring to statistics that show the damage that deforestation creates
- C talking about the causes of deforestation and the reasons why it will never be solved
- D giving examples of deforestation and how much is spent on planting trees

9 Which is the best summary of the selection?

- A Deforestation damages wildlife and hurts agriculture.
- B Deforestation causes climate change and affects greenhouse gases.
- C Deforestation causes many problems for the environment, but solutions are available.
- D Deforestation is easily stopped by cutting down the trees.
