Ooka and the Stolen Smell

by I.G. Edmonds

- 1 Ooka Tadasuke was a famous judge. He never refused to hear a case. It didn't matter how strange a case was. Ooka would always listen. The strangest case of all was the famous Case of the Stolen Smell.
- 2 It all began when a poor student rented a room over a shop where fried food could be bought. The student was a likeable young man. The shop owner was very greedy and treated students poorly. One day he heard the student talking with a friend.
- 3 "It is sad to be so poor that one can only afford to eat plain rice," the friend complained.
- 4 "Oh," said the student, "I have found an answer to that problem. I eat my rice when the shopkeeper downstairs fries his fish. The smell hurries up the stairs and gives me a warm hug, and my humble rice has much more flavor. It is really the smell that makes things taste so good."
- 5 The shopkeeper was furious. Somebody was enjoying the smell of his fish without paying! "Thief!" he shouted. "I demand that you pay me for the smells you have stolen."
- 6 "A smell is a smell," the student replied. "Anyone can smell what he wants to. I will pay you nothing."
- 7 The shopkeeper ran to Ooka's court and charged the student with theft. Everyone in the room laughed, but Ooka agreed to hear the case.
- 8 "Every person can have their day in court," Ooka explained.
- 9 Ooka sat on his bench and listened to the shopkeeper and the student.
- 10 "The student is guilty," Ooka said. "Taking another person's property is theft. A smell is no different from any other property."
- 11 The shopkeeper was happy. The student was shocked. He was very poor, and he owed the shopkeeper for three months of smelling. The judge would probably throw him in jail.

- 12 "How much money do you have?" Ooka asked him.
- 13 "Only enough to pay my rent," the student replied. "If I cannot pay my rent, I will be thrown out into the street."
- 14 "Let me see the money," Ooka said.
- 15 The young man held the money out. Ooka told him to move the money from one hand to the other.
- 16 The judge listened to the sound of the money. "You have now been paid," he told the shopkeeper. "If you have any more complaints, please bring them to me."
- 17 "But your Honor," the shopkeeper said. "I did not get the money! The thief just dropped it from one hand to the other. I have nothing." He held up his empty hands.
- 18 Ooka stared at the shopkeeper. "It is my judgment that punishment should fit the crime. I have decided that the price of the smell of food is the sound of money. You have now been paid. This case is over."

Types of Clouds

- 1 Have you ever sat back to see what shapes the clouds above you were making? Chances are you were looking at cumulus clouds. Cumulus clouds are puffy and white like cotton balls. They come in all different shapes and sizes.
- 2 But cumulus clouds are only one type of cloud. For years, people have studied the color and speed of clouds so that they can predict the weather. In the process, they've discovered many different types of clouds. Some clouds are found at higher altitudes than others. Some clouds are puffy and look like different types of animals. Others are flat. Each type of cloud has its own name. But most clouds fall into one of three main types. They can be cumulus, cirrus, or stratus.
- 3 Clouds are identified by how far up they're found in the sky and the way that they look. Cirrus clouds travel very high in the sky. Generally, they are found at altitudes over 18,000 feet. They are wispy and light. They may look like feathers or like a pony's tail. Sometimes several cirrus clouds will be in a row. The clouds look like a trail of smoke across the sky.
- 4 Stratus clouds are closer to the earth and are usually found at about 7,000 feet. Stratus clouds are gray and flat. They all look like part of the same mass of cloud. You can't really tell that the group is more than one cloud. Often, they cover the whole sky.
